

What I, Irene Farmer, claim as my invention is a specially designed furniture housing. The housing has a unique grooving designed to accept specifically designed plastic baskets. The grooves are tapered in such away that they will accept the baskets easily but when pulled extremely forward they must be raised slightly to remove.

I, Irene Farmer, claim as my invention a basket made for fitting into my specially designed housing. It has a thick round rim to enable easy carrying and to add strength.

None of the other drawer or basket designs offer these unique features.

What I, Irene Farmer, claim as my design is a combination of baskets and housing that will enable an easier and more conveint way of transporting and storing than has been previously devised.
